1 50X1-HUM

INFORMATION REPORT INFORMATION REPORT

	S-E-C-R-E-T		50X1-HUN
UNTRY	Poland	REPOR
BJECT	Infantry Reserve Training Unit in Lebork	DATE DISTR. $2 AUG 1880	İ
	. 4	NO. PAGES 2
		REFERENCES RD	5074 111104
TE OF O.			50X1-HUM
CE &
	SOURCE EVALUATIONS ARE DEFINITIVE. AP	PRAISAL OF CONTENT IS TENTATIVE	50X1-HUN
1.	A motorized infantry regiment,		50X1-HUN
1.		Pommern) as it existed at the to the specifically for the purposed in Lebork in a barracks which take the second 189455. The barracks had been 189455 at which time	50X1-HUN
1.	A motorized infantry regiment, which was established late in 19 training reserves, was quartered was a former mental hospital locator grid coordinate 33 u XX occupied by a tank regiment until regiment was transferred either to	Pommern) as it existed at the tops of the purposed in Lebork in a barracks which taked at Universal Transverse a 789455. The barracks had been at November 1958 at which time to Szczecinek (Neustettin) or a school for draftees was under the atry regiment. The school's could had a few T-50 tanks. No ad	50X1-HUN
	A motorized infantry regiment, which was established late in 19 training reserves, was quartered was a former mental hospital loc Mercator grid coordinate 33 u XA occupied by a tank regiment untimegiment was transferred either torun. A moncommissioned officers' sch direction of the motorized infantwas nine months long. The school	Pommern) as it existed at the tops of the purposed in Lebork in a barracks which are the top of the purposed o	50X1-HUN

INFORMATION REPORT INFORMATION REDORT Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2010/09/24 : CIA-RDP80T00246A055800020001-0

X FBI

NSA

St

X ARMY EV #X NAVY X AIR

Note: Washington distribution indicated by "X"; Field distribution by "#".)

STATE

S-E-C-R-E-T

No information about the organization of other units could be provided. The following commanding officers were in the motorized infantry regiment: Colonel /Tnu/ Romanowski, chief of the regiment. Major /Tnu/ Malinowski, chief of the artillery detachment. Captain /Tnu/ Buras, chief of the 120-mm mortar battalion. Captain /Tnu/ Buras, chief of the 120-mm mortar battalion. The artillery detachment had six 120-mm mortars, eight 85-mm antitank guns, and four 76-mm guns. Twelve 120-mm mortars in the depot allegedly also belonged to the artillery detachment. No Soviet troops had been observed in the Leba-Lebork area since Gomulka assumed power in 1956. No Soviet troops had been observed in the Leba-Lebork which was converted into a barracks for the Folish Army. Comments
No information about the organization of other units could be provided. The following commanding officers were in the motorized infantry regiment: Colonel / Inu/ Romanowski, chief of the regiment. Major / Inu/ Malinowski, chief of the artillery detachment. Captain / Inu/ Buras, chief of the 120-mm mortar battalion. Captain / Inu/ Buras, chief of the 120-mm mortars battalion. The artillery detachment had six 120-mm mortars, eight 85-mm antitank guns, and four 76-mm guns. Twelve 120-mm mortars in the depot allegedly also belonged to the artillery detachment. No Soviet troops had been observed in the Leba-Lebork area since Gomulka assumed power in 1956. Map showing the Sox1-H				50X1-HUM
The following commanding officers were in the motorized infantry regiment: Colonel / Thu/ Romanowski, chief of the regiment. Major / Finu/ Malinowski, chief of the artillery detachment. Captain / Thu/ Buras, chief of the 120-mm mortar battalion. Captain / Thu/ Janus, chief of the 70 and 85-mm artillery battalion. The artillery detachment had six 120-mm mortars, eight 85-mm antitank guns, and four 76-mm guns. Twelve 120-mm mortars in the depot allegedly also belonged to the artillery detachment. No Soviet troops had been observed in the Leba-Lebork area since Gomulka assumed power in 1956. map showing the location of the former hospital (Provinzial Heilanstalt) in Lebork which was converted into a barracks for the Rolish Army. Comments 1. This is the first time this unit reported. It should be added that this is the first report indicating that a new unit has been established specifically for the purpose of reserve training. It had been assumed that such training took place at existing units. 2. The tank regiment referred to may have been independent tank battalion, of the Pomeranian Military District. If the unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Sazeceinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Bivision. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed.		- 2 -
The following commanding officers were in the motorized infantry regiment: Colonel / Thu/ Romanowski, chief of the regiment. Major / Finu/ Malinowski, chief of the artillery detachment. Captain / Thu/ Buras, chief of the 120-mm mortar battalion. Captain / Thu/ Janus, chief of the 70 and 85-mm artillery battalion. The artillery detachment had six 120-mm mortars, eight 85-mm antitank guns, and four 76-mm guns. Twelve 120-mm mortars in the depot allegedly also belonged to the artillery detachment. No Soviet troops had been observed in the Leba-Lebork area since Gomulka assumed power in 1956. map showing the location of the former hospital (Provinzial Heilanstalt) in Lebork which was converted into a barracks for the Rolish Army. Comments 1. This is the first time this unit reported. It should be added that this is the first report indicating that a new unit has been established specifically for the purpose of reserve training. It had been assumed that such training took place at existing units. 2. The tank regiment referred to may have been independent tank battalion, of the Pomeranian Military District. If the unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Sazeceinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Bivision. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed.	• 🔅
Colonel / Thu/ Romanowski, chief of the regiment. Major / Thu/ Malinowski, chief of the artillery detachment. Captain / Thu/ Burs; chief of the 120-mm mortar battalion. Captain / Thu/ Janus, chief of the 76 and 85-mm artillery battalion. The artillery detachment had six 120-mm mortars, eight 85-mm antitank guns, and four 76-mm guns. Twelve 120-mm mortars in the depot allegedly also belonged to the artillery detachment. No Soviet troops had been observed in the Leba-Lebork area since Gomulka assumed power in 1956. map showing the SoX1-H		out the organization	of other units co	ould be
Major Thuy Buras, chief of the artillery detachment. Captain Thuy Buras, chief of the 120-mm mortar battalion. Captain Thuy Buras, chief of the 76 and 85-mm artillery battalion. The artillery detachment had six 120-mm mortars, eight 85-mm antitank guns, and four 76-mm guns. Twelve 120-mm mortars in the depot allegedly also belonged to the artillery detachment. No Soviet troops had been observed in the Leba-Lebork area since Gomulka assumed power in 1956. Map showing the location of the former hospital (Provinzial Heilanstalt) in Lebork which was converted into a barracks for the Polish Army. Comments 1. This is the first time this unit reported. It should be added that this is the first report indicating that a new unit has been established specifically for the purpose of reserve training. It had been assumed that such training took place at existing units. 2. The tank regiment referred to may have been independent tank battalion, of the Pomeranian Military District. If the 20th Eank Edvision. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torum, and furthermore, at the Torum location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed. No Soviet troops had been observed in the 120-mm mortars in the depot and the 1950-mm anti-tank guns a since Gomulka at ank unit is missing. existed.		anding officers wer	e in the motorized	l infantry tank guns, and four 76-mm guns. Twelve 120-mm mortars in the depot allegedly also belonged to the artillery detachment. No Soviet troops had been observed in the Leba-Lebork area since Gomulka assumed power in 1956. map showing the location of the former hospital (Provinzial Heilanstalt) in Lebork which was converted into a barracks for the Polish Army. Comments	Major /fnu/ Maline Captain /fnu/ Burs	wski, chief of the s. chief of the 120	artillery detachme -mm mortar battali	on.
map showing the 100x1-H	tank guns, and for	ır 76-mm guns. Twel	ve 120-mm mortars	85-mm anti- in the depot
Comments 1. This is the first time this unit reported. It should be added that this is the first report indicating that a new unit has been established specifically for the purpose of reserve training. It had been assumed that such training took place at existing units. 2. The tank regiment referred to may have been independent tank battalion, of the Pomeranian Military District. If the unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Szczecinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Division. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed.	No Soviet troops h	and been observed in	the Leba-Lebork a	rea since
Comments 1. This is the first time this unit reported. It should be added that this is the first report indicating that a new unit has been established specifically for the purpose of reserve training. It had been assumed that such training took place at existing units. 2. The tank regiment referred to may have been independent tank battalion, of the Pomeranian Military District. If the unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Szczecinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Division. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed.					X1-HL
1. This is the first time this unit reported. It should be added that this is the first report indicating that a new unit has been established specifically for the purpose of reserve training. It had been assumed that such training took place at existing units. 2. The tank regiment referred to may have been independent tank battalion, of the Pomeranian Military District. If the unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Szczecinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Division. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed. 50X1-HUM 50X1-HUM		- '	-	which
1. This is the first time this unit reported. It should be added that this is the first report indicating that a new unit has been established specifically for the purpose of reserve training. It had been assumed that such training took place at existing units. 2. The tank regiment referred to may have been independent tank battalion, of the Pomeranian Military District. If the unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Szczecinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Mivision. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed. 50X1-HUM 50X1-HUM 50X1-HUM	Comments			, reported. It should be added that this is the first report indicating that a new unit has been established specifically for the purpose of reserve training. It had been assumed that such training took place at existing units. 2. The tank regiment referred to may have been independent tank battalion, of the Pomeranian Military District. If the unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Szczecinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Division. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed.	1. This is the first	time this unit	heve he)X1-H of the Pomeranian Military District. If the unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Szczecinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Division. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed.	reported. It sho ing that a new un of reserve traini	ald be added that this : It has been established ng. It had been assume	is the first report in specifically for the	dicat- 50 purpose	X1-HI
unit was transferred, it most likely was transferred to Torun rather than the Szczecinek area which was already occupied by units from the 20th Tank Division. As far as can be determined, unused barracks were available at Torun, and furthermore, at the Torun location the unit would be nearer the Pomeranian Military District headquarters in Bydgoszcz to which the unit is directly subordinate. 3. The organization shown appears logical although a tank unit is missing. existed.	2. The tank regiment	referred to may have be	een independent tank b	attalion, missing. existed. no tank unit 50X1-HUM	unit was transfer than the Szczecine 20th Tank Division available at Torus would be nearer th	of the Pomeranian red, it most likely was alread a read which was alread a read as can be detailed, and furthermore, at the Pomeranian Military likely and response to the red of the red o	n Military District. transferred to Torun dy occupied by units f termined, unused barra the Torun location the District headquarters	If the 50X1-HU rather rom the cks were unit	М
;	missing.	shown appears logical a		503/4 1111	M
!
				į.
				•

S-E-C-R-E-T NOFORN/CONTINUED CONTROL

